Failure to Thrive Nutrition Therapy

This handout explains how to choose foods that will help your child to get enough calories and protein to gain weight and grow better.

Meal Planning Tips

- Establish a regular meal and snack routine for your child:
 - Plan for three meals and two or three snacks, spaced at least 1 to 2 hours apart.
 - Allow 15 to 30 minutes for a meal, and 5 to 15 minutes for a snack.
 - Do not offer anything to eat or drink between set meal and snack times (except for water).
- Limit water and juice to 4 to 8 ounces per day. Offer milk or formula to drink instead.
- Make meals and snacks quiet, pleasant, and relaxed gatherings.
 - Limit distractions during meals. Turn off the television.
 - If possible, all family members should remain at the table for the entire mealtime.
- Feed your child in a chair at the table. Use forks, spoons, cups, bowls, and plates that are the right size for toddlers.
- Offer solid foods first, and limit the amount of fluids your child drinks with meals or snacks.
- If your child refuses to eat or throws a tantrum, wait a few minutes and try again. If the behavior continues, end the meal and wait until the next scheduled snack or meal to offer any food or drink (except water). Do not pay much attention to such behavior.
- Do not discuss eating in front of your child except to ask if she or he wants more or is done eating. Never force your child to eat.
- Add extra calories to every meal and snack. (See Recommended Foods for suggestions.)
